my name is Allen England I've enclosed some signatures that i have collected to save. The coal plants that Idaho power owns shares in these plants are located in the states of Oregon, Nevada, and Wyoming. Closing these plants will cause a poverty situation in these smaller communities with job loss and tax revenue. The decommissioning of these coal plants is very costly to the electric customers. Windmills and solar panels are not reliable and have a huge installation cost. Windmill blades and motor housing have no current recycling program and will have to be buried in landfills. The best option is to install new emission equipment and keep these plants open

Thank you

Allen England

You look at the good jobs lost, not only at the plant, but the mines. For every one plant or mine job there are probably about ten other jobs affected. Subsidies need cut off for renewables on a fair playing field coal kicks green energy ass. Billions spent on it and its 7% of our power.

There is NOTHING COMPARABLE to the economic benefits of coal ! From producer to consumer! Those ads depicting coal plants as dirty are deceptive to viewers.....we need a counter as to educate the public. That "smoke" coming from the stacks at a plant is STEAM!

I work at a coal fire plant as a major maintenance and they are trying to close it down so I understand the stress of worrying about your job. Green energy isn't as green as everyone thinks. Fossil fuels power can me clean too you just have to have the proper systems in line to make it clean too and more efficient.

> claims that coal power plants are harming the environment as claimed and new studies have recently shown that these types of plants do virtually no harm to the environment as claimed

Ignoring the word salad that this is, claiming there are studies and failing the burden of proof to provide sources is blunder 101. All I see are a bunch of whiney conservative snowflakes crying "muh jobs!" There is a reason the global economy is making a shift toward renewable energy. The pushback is simply corporate entities more worried about their short-term profit than long-term cause and effect. Coal workers should train in renewable energy jobs. If they don't at this point, they've only got themselves to blame if they find themselves without work, because we know this is a long time coming. I'm probably talking to a brick wall, though. Right-wingers have been conditioned to believe whatever talking points come their way without running them by their own critical thinking skills, because coming to any conclusion other than what the status quo demands is shunned in that community. Quite sad, really. RIP America

I would appreciate if all of my friends would sign this petition.

The sierra club and its constituents are not on point with their claims that coal power plants are harming the environment as claimed and new studies have recently shown that these types of plants do virtually no harm to the environment as claimed. It is important that we have reliable and affordable energy for the public and blue collar jobs like this that pay well to be preserved for the future. These jobs pay much better than oil and natural gas jobs and allow a blue collar individual to actually have a ability to pay his bills and make a living instead of being in constant debt and worry each month about his check to check life under a wage that does not provide substance to make a home and life for his family.

Thank you for your time .
