

To Idaho Public Commission,

This letter is in regards to your recent decision to allow Idaho Power to renegotiate the rate they reimburse their solar customers. So many questions, where to begin? First, what is the importance of the exemption for solar customers prior to 2019, yet there does not seem to be any consideration for maybe giving this exemption to people now moving forward? Two, still have to disagree that Idaho Power is not making money even at the current rate of reimbursement being given to solar customers. Selling this extra power on the open market, let alone making money by not having to purchase extra power on the open market if needed, and should also be making money by getting more people on solar, thus reducing the strain on the power grid, not increasing the strain. Third, it seems this decision was probably already made, just needed to go through the steps for legal reasons. Still find it odd that the IPUC is the one bringing up the subject wanting Idaho Power to do a study? Thought the IPUC's job was to look out for the consumer, not the utilities. I really feel this decision is a bad one for the consumer, and does nothing but to increase the profits for the power company. And this is exactly what this decision is going to do. I hope this commission will strongly reconsider this decision, as it will do nothing to benefit people on solar one bit. Unless that is the goal of the commission to destroy the solar companies within Idaho.

Sincerely yours

Harvey Iverson
