Comment: "I have not been able to be put in touch with a representative from Idaho Power. They announced (along with Rocky Mountain Power) that the solar export credit will be reduced substantially (almost 50% of summer off peak hours). This is price gouging targeting home solar users. Idaho Power has already risen power rates and are now decreasing the credit price for exporting solar power back into the grid. This is less than 16 months since they eliminated their true net based metering policies. They are deliberately starting to take advantage of customers who have added solar power to their homes. By their own admission, based on notices given to customers, they want to "raise power bills on by 42%" on homes equipped with solar panels. "
