It defies credulity that Dynamis has been able to pull off such an untested, unproved, and unneeded ponzi scheme like is being perpetrated in Idaho cities. Dynamis will cost countless millions to put in place and they make no promises that their efforts will even work. The Ada County Commissioners need to be much wiser and stop this nonsense while they can and millions of dollars wasted----there is no proven fact that trash can be converted to energy without adverse consequences....Time to stop and think and kill this pipe dream...

Please describe your comment briefly:

With a little common sense it seems very curious that a company can promise something that hasn't been achieved by anyone without bankrupting the local government. If this was something that was already being done across Europe without subsidies then maybe it would be viable. Causing more cost to Idaho customers seems a little backwards to helping the economy.
